UNDISCOVERED TREASURE OF EUROPE

MONTENEGRO = BLACK MOUNTAIN

History of the name - back in the past, when the conquering countries were moving the Montenegrin people would retreat into the mountains and forests, from which the attacks of the conquerors were rejected.

The legend says that the opponents soldiers when they received orders to attack Montenegro used to say that they are going to the „black mountains“, from where usually they would hardly come back... How we got name „Montenegro“? Our neighbors are Italians and they call us Montenegro because in Latin language „Montagna negra“ means „black mountain“ and the Italians used that name for the region which other took, so that is today known as Montenegro.

It is very important to say that Montenegro is the only country in the Balkans that has never been fully conquered by any great empire. Throughout history Montenegrin brave warriors always managed to keep one part of the country free!

After the capitulation of Italy in 1943 the ship was abandoned in Venice where it was used as the bridge in one of Venetian canals. At the request of Yugoslav government, the ship was back in Tivat, where it was restored. Former president of Yugoslavia Josip Broz Tito loved this sailing ship and used to sail with it alongside the coast of Adriatic. Today it is still located in Tivat showing off its beauty and pride! It represents one of the tourist attractions of the city and one of the most beautiful sailing ships in whole Europe!

MORE THAN HUNDRED YEARS OF WAR

- MONTENEGRO VS JAPAN -

Interesting historical fact is the war between Montenegro and Japan, that lasted for more than 100 years! From the 1904 when the war was declared by Montenegro. We entered this war supporting Russian empire which had intentions of expanding their influence in Manchuria and Korean peninsula, as well as Japanese empire did. Although two empires did not agree and Russians rejected the Japanese offer, the war broke out!

Montenegrins not only declared war on Japan, but sent volunteers that went all the way across the globe to fight alongside Slavic brothers against the Japanese. One of the most striking events related to the Montenegro's involvement in that war, was the story about Aleksandar Lekso Saicic, a Montenegrin soldier who defeated a samurai in a sword fight!

Before the two armies clashed in the battle, the strange request from the Japanese General came. He demanded that before the battle, they arrange a duel between two of their champions. Montenegrin soldier stood out to fight in front of Russian army against the Japanese champion. Lekso convinced the General of Russian army that he was the right person for the duel.

The fight between Lekso and samurai took place in Eastern Manchuria, somewhere near the city of Vladivostok. After taking several serious blows, this brave Montenegrin somehow managed to defeat the samurai and this gave the psychological advantage to the Russian army.

The sword he used to kill the samurai is being kept to this day in the Russian Military Museum in Moscow.

The peace treaty between Russians and Japanese was signed in Portsmouth in 1905, but the Montenegrins did not sign it. Japanese were angry because of our brave warrior. We were still in war, but on a great distance ☺ Year after year passed by and Japanese were living in fear that Montenegrins will strike once again! Finally, after more than 100 years, they gather courage to asked for peace treaty! After several months of „exhausting“ negotiation the peace treaty between two countries was signed ☺
